We are very comfortable with the information provided; we are confident we will be informed by our daughter when the subject is being discussed but would be good to know as and when the information will be shared so we can supplement this learning at home.

The policy and approach appears comprehensive, considered and appropriate; we don't believe anything is missing here.

One thing I have noticed is that, as a result of lockdowns, some children are struggling with remembering how to interact and play with peers, especially in larger numbers, as they've been on their own for so long, which has led to some anxiety. As the weather is getting better, I feel using opportunities to play and re-learn social skills during the summer term would be really useful. It would build confidence and develop speaking and listening skills while meeting the needs of the RSE curriculum.
Glad to see the inclusion of an online element covering safe online relationships.

Do you have any other feedback or comments you would like to make that would help us shape our curriculum?
I'm a dietitian working at royal derby hospital, so if there's anything I can do to support the teaching of the healthy eating elements in any way, let me know
